

Our Philosophy

At St. Joseph's at Fleming, we believe that care and compassion are essential in fostering sanctity of life. That's why our primary concern is to create a home for our Residents where they can be given the best possible care in an environment of personal worth and dignity.

Our Resident and family-centred approach reflects the importance we place on treating our Residents with love and respect. We believe that when we welcome a new Resident, we also embrace their family so we have worked hard to ensure that St. Joseph's at Fleming is a warm, friendly and accessible environment for everyone concerned. A home enriched with hope and companionship by the surroundings of our thriving community.

Our History

St. Joseph's at Fleming is an unprecedented endeavor, the result of a partnership between Marycrest Home for the Aged, Anson House and Fleming College. In 1998, Marycrest Home for the Aged and Anson House made the historic decision to amalgamate, combining over 236 years of experience as well respected providers of long-term care, and join Fleming College in realizing a unique vision of long-term care.

Together we have embarked on this new chapter in our long and distinguished histories with a solemn commitment to our Residents and their families. True to our past, our focus on dignity and quality of life, with an emphasis on multi-denominational pastoral care, will not waver.

Our Unique Partnership

The first long-term care facility to partner with a learning institution, St. Joseph's at Fleming is also home to Fleming College's Institute for Healthy Aging (IHA) and the Fleming Child Care Centre. Our unique partnership creates a truly intergenerational environment, providing rich learning opportunities to staff and students from Fleming College and promoting learning and research about best practices in geriatric and long-term care.
